The University of South Florida Police Department is proud to announce its success in the 2006 International Association of Chief's of Police (IACP) Law Enforcement Challenge. USF Police Department took second place amongst similarly sized university law enforcement agencies.

USF Police Chief Longo stated, "The real import of our placing so well is national recognition of what we do daily to keep our community safe. The emphasis this department places on traffic safety, including speeding, DUI and seatbelt use illustrates our dedication to our students, staff and visitors. With so many cars and pedestrians in motion on our campus traffic safety must be a priority."

What is the Law Enforcement Challenge Program?

The Law Enforcement Challenge is a competition between similar sizes and types of law enforcement agencies. It recognizes and rewards the best overall traffic safely programs in the United States. The areas of concentration include efforts to enforce laws and educate the public about occupant protection, impaired driving, and speeding. Departments submit an application (usually in a three ring or presentation binder) which documents their agency's efforts and effectiveness in these areas. The winning safety programs are those that combine officer training, public information and enforcement to reduce crashes and injuries within its jurisdiction.
