Chinese and Chinese-Influenced Music in the Twenty-First Century

This project includes a book of essays exhibiting cross-influences between Chinese and Western music in the twenty-first century, co-edited by professors Hui Yu of Yunnan University and myself. The emphasis is on Chinese composers influenced by Chinese music, Western composers impacted by their studies of Chinese traditional music, and Western influences upon modern Chinese composers. Selected papers read at the USF Composition in Asia conferences (2015, 2018) will be included, while additional scholars have been invited to submit essays, thus ensuring that the topics discussed in the book will be attractive to a wider circulation of international readers.
